

Ethical Recruitment Charter Launched

Ethical Recruitment Charter for Reading signed at RBC Chambers

Event held on Thursday 12th March

On Thursday March 12th Reading Borough Council hosted the official signing of the Ethical Recruitment Charter created by Ethical Reading, the Reading Borough Council and Eximius Group. The launch was attended by the charity leadership, Council leaders, local MPs, APSCo, local recruitment professionals and business community leaders.

All against the backdrop of COVID-19 which meant people showed real commitment to the cause!

This enjoyable event marked the official signing of the charter between Ethical Reading and the Reading Borough Council leadership with Eximius Group in attendance to demonstrate the new website which will enable businesses to register to be members and allow job seekers to raise complaints.

Eximius Group are incredibly grateful that APSCo attended as well as several members of the Reading recruitment community. The involvement of the professional staffing community is vital in ensuring Reading and the surrounding areas are a hub for ethical recruitment practices across the business spectrum.

The packed evening involved comparing by Gurpritpal Singh and Antoine De Vazelhes representing Ethical Reading. Speeches from Adele Barnett-Ward, Jason Brock and Peter Sloman from RBC, a passionate speech from MP for Reading East Matt Rodda, an informative presentation by Samantha Hurley from APSCo and a presentation by James Parkin from Eximius Group.

Following this event Eximius Group is going to be encouraging all Reading employers to sign up to the Ethical Recruitment Charter. No matter the business size recruiting with respect, fairness and transparency is vital in making the Thames Valley a successful economic market that attracts talent.
